Dear Friends and Colleagues:

Formed over 125 years ago as a response to threats against ethnic minorities in our community, the King County Bar Association has stood as a steadfast champion for the cause of equal rights and equal access to our legal system.

With funding from the King County Bar Foundation, which in turn is made possible by the generous donations of individuals, law firms, businesses and other organizations, and with the volunteer services of more than 1,300 legal professionals annually, KCBA has been able in the face of a challenging economy to continue delivering a wide range of pro bono legal services to the most vulnerable among us — the poor. In 2011, we were able to provide 10,608 King County residents with civil legal services valued at $7,427,317.50, turning every dollar donated into approximately $8.03 of civil legal aid. More important than the numbers, though, is the effect that our services have had on the lives of those we have served — the emancipation of spouses and children from abuse, the protection of families and individuals from unjustified loss of a home or a job, the recognition of rights to medical benefits for the aged and infirm, and the safeguarding of so many other rights.

Although the weak economy has caused an 80% statewide decline in IOLTA revenues since 2007 and forced a curtailment in governmental programs that support or supplement providers of civil legal aid, our strong partnership with LAW Fund on the King County Law Firm Campaign For Equal Justice and the continued success of our annual Breakfast With Champions have enabled KCBF to avoid severe curtailments in services. This past year, 118 firms donated a record $527,340 to the King County Law Firm Campaign for Equal Justice, demonstrating once again a broad commitment to access to justice among the local legal profession. Our 2012 Breakfast once again was a sell-out with over 1,000 attendees and generated nearly $300,000 in sponsorships, ticket sales, and event donations.

In addition to our civil legal aid programs, KCBF is dedicated to the encouragement of diversity within the legal profession. As in each of the two prior years, KCBF in 2011-2012 awarded a total of $125,000 in scholarships to Seattle University Law School and the University of Washington Law School, making it possible for a stellar group of minority law students to pursue their dreams of a career in the law. In its tenth year, our pipeline program, the Future of the Law Institute, provided an introduction to the law as a career to local minority and economically disadvantaged high school students. Through funded guarantees of scholarships for program graduates who advance to college and law school, FLI provides a significant incentive to participants to consider law as their vocation.

So many people and organizations deserve credit for our continued success in delivering legal services to the disadvantaged and providing opportunities within the legal profession to diverse elements of our society. I am constantly amazed at the commitment of our Board members, the skill and professionalism of the team members at KCBA who administer our programs, the dedication of thousands of volunteer lawyers, and the generosity of law firms and individual lawyers, of members of the judiciary, and of non-profit groups and business community partners such as the Legal Foundation of Washington; Microsoft Corporation; Navigant Consulting, Inc.; RealNetworks Foundation; Law School Admission Council; the King County Department of Community and Human Services; Wal-Mart Stores, Inc.; Starbucks Coffee Company; and the cities of Kent, Renton, and Federal Way.

Whatever form your own contribution to our twin missions has taken, or may take, thank you. You can take justifiable pride in knowing that your support is making life appreciably better for a great many people.

Ensuring Access to Justice

Family Law

Family Law includes the Family Law Mentor Program, the Kinship Care Solutions Project and the Self Help Plus Program. These programs assist clients with the following legal issues: direct representation for contested divorces where domestic violence is present and/or children are at risk, third-party non-parental custody cases, and non-contested divorces or parenting plans.

Housing Justice Project

The Housing Justice Project (HJP) provides free legal help to eligible low-income tenants facing eviction. This clinic meets daily at the King County Superior Courthouse in downtown Seattle and at the Maleng Regional Justice Center in Kent. HJP also offers an evening clinic in Seattle at the King County Superior Courthouse.

Community Services

Community Services includes the Neighborhood Legal Clinics (NLC), Homeless Clinics, and Volunteer Legal Services (VLS). NLC offers individuals a free half-hour consultation with an attorney. Attorneys determine whether the client has a legal problem, suggest possible options, and provide appropriate referrals. At the Homeless Clinics, volunteer attorneys advise shelter residents on their legal problems and may provide on-going representation when needed. VLS offers eligible clients direct on-going representation. VLS takes cases in Chapter 7 bankruptcy, vacating criminal records, Social Security overpayments, wills and estate planning, housing, and debt defense.

Increasing Diversity in the Legal Profession

KCBF Minority Law Student Scholarships

KCBF is one of the largest providers of minority law student scholarships in Washington. In 2011-2012, KCBF distributed $125,000 to the University of Washington and Seattle University law schools for this purpose. Since this program began in 1970, over 700 scholarships have been awarded and over half of the scholarship recipients still practice in Washington.

Future of the Law Institute

Future of the Law Institute (FLI) is a year-long program for minority and economically disadvantaged high school students interested in learning more about a career in the law. FLI provides students with substantive legal workshops, career counseling, a mock trial, a courthouse tour, and opportunities to meet with legal professionals. Students are eligible for scholarships when they continue on to higher education.

Sandra, a 26-year-old pregnant woman, faced eviction from her home which would result in the permanent loss of her Section 8 voucher and make it impossible for her to afford housing. She recently started a new job but had fallen behind in rent and utilities while she was unemployed, and her landlord was unwilling to negotiate an agreement that would enable Sandra to remain in her home. The Housing Justice Project attorney that worked with Sandra focused on a plan to put Sandra in the best position to keep her housing voucher, thereby helping her avoid homelessness.

The volunteer attorney negotiated a very extended move-out timeframe which gave Sandra more than an additional month to find new housing. This was important to Sandra because of her pregnancy but also because getting a moving voucher from the housing authority takes extra time. Next, the HJP attorney ensured that the agreement between Sandra and her landlord involved regular payments—within Sandra’s means—on the balance she owed, which can also help to preserve a tenant’s voucher. Finally, the parties agreed that upon Sandra’s compliance with the terms of the agreement, the unlawful detainer case would be dismissed.

The Housing Justice Project staff also referred Sandra to King County Housing Stabilization Services where she will receive assistance with the payments and case management as she prepares to move. Upon arrival at HJP, Sandra and her unborn child faced imminent homelessness. When she left the courthouse that afternoon, she left with a home to return to, a plan for the future, and the resources to help her succeed.

“I did it. We did it. You did it. Whoever did it, it’s now done. Thank you for all of your help. Watch out, I’m giving your number to everyone I know!”

Over 1,000 members and friends of the legal community gathered at the Westin Seattle Hotel on Thursday, March 22, 2012, for the King County Bar Foundation’s 12th annual Breakfast With Champions. The Breakfast, KCBF’s premier fundraiser, raised $292,765 in sponsorships, cash, and pledges in support of the Foundation’s pro bono civil legal aid and diversity programs.

Mara Liasson, National Public Radio’s political correspondent and regular contributor to All Things Considered and Morning Edition, entertained guests with her witty and thought-provoking insight on the changing face of American politics. Hon. Charles S. Burdell, Jr. (Ret.) emceed the program which also featured KCBF President James L. Austin, Jr. and Zeshan Khan who shared his experience as a volunteer for two of the King County Bar’s pro bono programs.

The Breakfast With Champions is a key component in the King County Bar’s ability to provide civil legal aid for over 10,000 low-income King County residents and approximately 50 scholarships for minority law students at Seattle University and the University of Washington each year. This year the Foundation premiered a video highlighting its Minority Law Student Scholarship program with profiles of former and current scholarship recipients Hon. Ronald E. Cox (Washington State Court of Appeals, Division I), Jamila Johnson (Schwabe Williamson & Wyatt), and Anthony Thach (1L, University of Washington).

The King County Bar Foundation thanks its sponsors, table captains, guests, trustees, staff, and volunteers for making the 2012 Breakfast With Champions a success. Special acknowledgement to the Breakfast planning committee who volunteered their time to organize this event: Michael S. Schechter (Co-Chair), Megan S. Wells (Co-Chair), James L. Austin, Jr., Kathryn M. Battuello, Hon. Charles S. Burdell, Jr. (Ret.), Daniel J. Dunne, Curt Hineline, M. Colleen Kinerk, Christopher B. Wells, and Benson D. Wong.

Maria, a mother of three boys, came to the Family Law Mentor program after having filed a marriage dissolution pro se. Maria’s husband had abused their oldest child quite severely and Child Protective Services had implemented a safety plan with the family. Maria was following the safety plan which allowed some limited contact between the father and his sons, but in order to finalize the dissolution, the court required a parenting plan that would keep the children safe and that Maria and the children’s father could agree on. The father was resistant, but with the help of the Family Law Mentor volunteer attorney, a parenting plan that was acceptable to both parties as well as the court was negotiated.

Maria and the children’s father had been married for a long time, and since Maria stayed home with the children, she had no means to house and support her family on her own. In addition to negotiating the parenting plan, the Family Law Mentor volunteer attorney also negotiated a settlement in which Maria received some long-term maintenance from the children’s father, which put Maria in a secure financial place moving forward.

“Thank you very much for the professional staff you have and the timely manner in which you responded to my needs.”

We salute these Champions of Justice King County law firms, who represent the standard of excellence in the 2011-2012 Campaign for Equal Justice. These civically engaged lawyers and law firms are strengthening our communities by helping stabilize housing, income and benefits for thousands of families dealing with urgent civil legal crises.
Jennifer, a 40-year-old single woman had an unfortunate couple of years. She was diagnosed with cancer, divorced from her husband, and lost her job due to downsizing. She recovered and obtained a much lower paying job but remained vulnerable to garnishment of her wages due to the debt that was acquired during her illness.

The King County Bar’s Volunteer Legal Services program referred her to a bankruptcy attorney and her debt was discharged, giving Jennifer an opportunity for a fresh start.

“My experience was fantastic! Thank you for offering such a good program.”
